Questions 26-30 [3 point for the correct answer]

For each question choose the correct answer.

Jeremy: Welcome to the show, Adam. We keep hearing that humans are destroying the different habitats on Earth. Could you tell us what this actually means?

Adam: Certainly! Man has been damaging the land, sea, and air around him and as a result he is also threatening the survival of plants and animals that live there.

Jeremy: Why is this happening?

Adam: One of the reasons is that we are increasing the world's population by about one and a half billion people every ten years. More people means we need more food and therefore more land to grow the food. So we destroy the habitats of the animals and plants that live in the areas we transform into farms. Experts believe that over one hundred species become extinct every day because of us.

Jeremy: What are some other causes of habitat destruction?

Adam: Scientists believe that the poisonous chemicals we throw in the sea will cause the sea life to change or die out. Also, they say that we are destroying the forests, which make half of the oxygen in the world. Of course we cannot live without oxygen, but a large number of us seem to believe that this problem isn't so serious and hope that it will just go away by itself!

Jeremy: So how can we stop destroying natural habitats?

Adam: There are dozens of things we can do, but I believe that we should first turn our attention to our seas, lakes and rivers. People keep throwing rubbish and poisonous chemicals into them, putting wildlife at risk. And this is one of the most serious problems that a huge number of plant and animal species face.

Jeremy: Well, you've given all of us much to think about, Adam, thank you for your time.

Adam: Thank you.

26. What is one of the primary reasons that habitats are being destroyed according to Adam?

a. The expansion of urban areas for housing.
b. The increase in global tourism.
c. The need for more land to grow food due to population increase.
d. The construction of new factories.
e. The lack of awareness among people.

27. How does Adam suggest we should start addressing habitat destruction?

a. By reducing our carbon footprint.
b. By focusing on preserving forests.
c. By creating more wildlife reserves.
d. By turning our attention to our seas, lakes, and rivers.
e. By developing new technologies.

28. What does Adam imply about people's attitude towards the destruction of forests?

a. Many people underestimate the importance of the problem.
b. People are actively working to stop it.
c. There is a global initiative to plant more trees.
d. Most people are unaware of the issue.
e. They are not aware of the importance of forests.

29. Why do some people believe that the problem of habitat destruction isn't serious?

a. They are not aware of the problem.
b. They believe technology will solve the problem.
c. They think the problem will resolve itself.
d. They prioritize economic growth over environmental issues.
e. They think sea pollution is a bigger issue.

30. Why does Adam believe we should focus on protecting bodies of water first?

a. They provide the most resources for human consumption.
b. They are the easiest ecosystems to clean.
c. They are the most polluted by rubbish and chemicals.
d. They are less affected by climate change.
e. They produce oxygen.
